- Patterns correspond to different organs, meridians, tissues, or mind-body fields
- Imprinting device uses:
 - Photon-based resonance fields
 - Magnetic microcurrents
 - Precisely calibrated frequencies
- "Informs" water with corrective energetic signatures

Step 3: Preservation & Packaging

- Water preserved with plant-derived minerals for stability
- Bottled in UV-protective containers
- Batch-tested for energetic consistency

The Result

- Final product contains no chemical actives
- Therapeutic effect comes from informational imprint
- Designed to correct distortions in the body-field and support self-healing

The Efficacy of NES in the Treatment of ME/CFS

Emma Gillon

'If you have Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (CFS), Fibromyalgia Syndrome (FMS), Myalgic Encephalomyelitis (ME) or another disabling fatigue state, you have been through a difficult journey. I remember being told I was depressed. I was depressed. I was unable to function. Most people with Chronic Fatigue Syndrome have to struggle to get compassion and understanding'.

(Jacob Teitelbaum, From Fatigued to Fantastic! 2007)

Aim of Study

The aim was to evaluate NES treatment in reducing the subjective symptoms of ME/CFS.

Introduction:

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis/Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (ME/CFS) is a debilitating, often relapsing illness, affecting approximately a quarter of a million people in the UK (1), with similar rates of incidence in Europe, USA, New Zealand and Australia. Studies have shown that most sufferers are unable to work to full capacity (2), and that 25% are severely disabled with some house/bed-bound.

Early reports, dating from 1934, described epidemics of the illness—such as the 1955 outbreak at the Royal Free Hospital in London - but endemic (sporadic) cases are now more common. The World Health Organisation's International Classification of Disease lists ME/CFS as a disorder of the nervous system, under Post-Viral Fatigue Syndrome. A report to the Chief Medical Officer of England in 2002 stated that ME/CFS "is a genuine illness and imposes a substantial burden on the health of the UK population. Improvement of health and social care for people affected by the condition is an urgent challenge."

The cause of ME is still unknown, but there is unlikely to be one single causative agent. The early epidemics appear to have been triggered by an outbreak of an infection with enteric organisms or poliovirus which then subsided, and many patients report an infectious onset to their illness. However, in others, there may have been a variety of contributing factors — infectious, traumatic, environmental and endogenous — all of which can lead on to a condition which shares a set of common symptoms. There is currently no cure or effective treatment for the illness.

Symptoms of ME/CFS

CFS/ME is a debilitating and complex disorder characterised by profound fatigue that is not improved by bed rest and that may be worsened by physical or mental activity (3). The main symptoms of ME/CFS are post-exertional loss of muscle power; muscle pain that may include tenderness and swelling; physical and mental exhaustion following normal activities; and neurological signs. Patients are also prone to relapses which may take the form of recurrences of the original systemic illness, or fresh episodes of muscle weakness, neurological changes or well-defined cognitive problems. As with many chronic illnesses, fatigue may be present, but in ME patients the fatigue is post-exertion, often delayed, and quite unlike the 'fatigue' experienced by healthy people.

Personal Background of the Researcher

My interest in the efficacy of NES on the symptoms of ME-CFs stems from the fact that I was diagnosed with this debilitating condition in 1993.

After six months of feeling overwhelmingly exhausted to a level I had never experienced before while suffering flu symptoms, muscle weakness, mental fatigue and a range of other symptoms such as on-going headache. I was referred by my GP to the infectious diseases department at one of the Edinburgh hospitals. After many tests which all came back as clear, I was informed there was nothing that could be done to alleviate or treat my symptoms. In my determination to feel well once again, I could see no other way forward other than to try to find a solution to my condition via complementary therapies. I tried reflexology, herbalism, kinesiology, healing, acupuncture and nutritional therapy. All of these therapies provided short term relief but nothing lasting.
